Rare opportunity to occupy a fully self-contained period office building in the heart of one of London's most vibrant commercial districts

Description

101 Borough High Street presents a rare opportunity to occupy a fully self-contained period office building in the heart of one of London's most vibrant commercial districts. Extending to 4,494 sq ft across basement, ground, and three upper floors, the property combines classic architectural character with excellent natural light and generous ceiling heights.

The building features an array of elegant period details, including decorative wall panelling, original fireplaces, large sash windows, and a striking traditional staircase—all contributing to a sense of heritage and distinction. Currently undergoing refurbishment works to enhance and modernise the ground floor while preserving the building's historic charm, creating a workspace that feels both impressive and welcoming.

The upper floors benefit from expansive front-facing windows that maximise daylight and provide engaging views over Borough High Street. The rooms are well-proportioned, offering flexible layouts suitable for a variety of occupier needs—from creative studios and design firms to professional practices seeking a distinctive HQ setting.

With its own dedicated entrance, this is a truly self-contained headquarters-style building, ideal for companies seeking identity, autonomy and a strong presence in a thriving London location.
